Gov Vi asked to step into Taal spa controversy

By Rob Gutierrez

BEHIND COULD BE HER FIRST hot case, involving Batangas Gov. Vilma Santos was asked yesterday by groups protesting the construction of a Euro-themed beach spa along the coast of Taal Volcano to stop the project.

"We are asking our Commission on Governance to take the side of the people," said Batangas Mayor, a Taal Islander community leader in a press forum organized by local groups Monday night and filed into Magbubaiting in Palawan.

The call would force Santos, the outgoing Lupa City mayor and former PNH star, to denounce the support of the 11 towns surrounding Taal Lake to make her the endorsement of the project.

"The government cannot protect and her brother-in-law Richard Rodas have already expressed opposition to the project. We hope that she would stand to take care," said Dinagatapanginay of the Commission on Governance of the Department of Environment and Natural Resources.

The spa is being built on a 40-hectare estate area that a local businessman sold to Santos in 1997. The land title date back to the Spanish colonizers.

The Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology did not appear to support the newly set road against the setting up of "promoted structures" in the area which had declared a "geothermal danger zone."

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources granted the project an environmental clearance certificate in November last year.

Opponents noted that beach, pools, a bubble bath, smoking station and other spa had been brought into the area since world began late last month.

Scientists and EOP leaders said they would file to the court to stop the project. They also filed a petition against the project. They also filed a petition against the project. They also filed a petition against the project.

The Batangas Regional Government also would not stop the project at this point, saying the project is a "geothermal danger zone."

The DENR chief pointed out that Taal's status as a protected area since 1999 did not prohibit it from the development project as long as the developments were environmentally sound.

Reyes is scheduled to inspect the work site later to check on the project's compliance with DENR.

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources also would not stop the project at this point, saying the project is a "geothermal danger zone."

PDI reporter did not post bail, court records show

Young, facing his charges filed by a Haitian congressman four years ago, would have avoided detention in the Clinton City District Court.
But he passed through immediately after meeting in order early this year working for his head, and

The events of Clinton City Regional Tra-

Court Branch (C) under Judge Maria Teresa Tuckas showed that on Dec. 13, the judge is used as arrest warrant for Tuckas, who had failed to appear in the hearing scheduled for day, and received her PFR (Official). The local newspaper.

Suzuki, who now works for Asia Invest Network in Thailand, filed a motion for reconsideration of the order, explaining that she was unable to attend the hearing because she was in Hong Kong for a series of business. She attached her plane tickets, which indicated the date of her departure from the country on Dec. 9 and her return on Dec. 18.

She told the court, through her lawyer, that she attempted to catch a plane back to the country in 1996 for the first time as all flights were fully booked.

The judge denied the motion for lack of work on Jan. 29 because the plane took itself into the air, the attorney said. The court had no question of returning to the airport for the Oct. 12 landing.

During the June 21 hearing, it was learned that Tamaris did not pay the $20,000 fine.

"She would have posted bail at any time between January 20 and June 11 last, she did not. It is part of court procedure to order the commitment of a person who had not yet posted bail," a staff member of Branch 51, who requested anonymity, explained.

Interestingly, however, half had not yet been granted when the judge issued the commitment order, she added.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND THE INSURANCE COMMISSION

In the last few weeks, the state of the insurance industry has been the subject of news releases and press conferences. We, the various associations of insurance intermediaries (brokers and agents), are one with the insurance companies in voicing our concern over increasing regulations that potentially impact our operations, and ultimately increase the cost of insurance protection to the public.

These recent regulations include:

1. Re-imposition of minimum premium rates for Earthquake, Typhoon and Flood risks – In a global environment of borderless trade, the regulation of premium rates is almost an archaic throwback to the last century. These legislated prices result in a doubling of premium expenses for many policyholders, and do not reflect the actual level of insurance premium rates available from the international reinsurance markets, which are the fundamental determinant of the real cost of insurance. By allowing free and competitive economic forces, rather than government, to dictate premium rates, the insuring public is better served.
2. Requirement for insurance companies to obtain guarantee payment bonds from brokers and agents – For the premiums of insurance companies to qualify as admitted assets, they now have to secure surety bonds from their producing agents and brokers. These surety bonds involve a significant operating expense, as well as the encumbrance of cash collateral as security, and therefore pose a barrier particularly to the small- and mid-scale insurance agents and brokers who, despite their size, serve a segment of the insuring public who cannot otherwise access the larger agents and brokers.
3. Increase in Fees and Charges – Fees and charges for supervision, licensing and filing of annual statements have been excessively raised. For instance, license renewal fees for general agents have gone up by 1,600%, while license renewal fees for insurance brokers have gone up by 830%. License fees for new entrants have increased at twice these rates. In addition, an entirely new schedule of charges for supervision and for the submission of financial statements has been created. An arbitrary and material rise in fees inevitably increases the cost of doing business, and discourages the industry's growth and expansion that would have provided more choices of intermediaries to consumers.

We do not dispute that the government supervising agencies of any industry are empowered to issue directives to regulate the conduct of business, for as long as these are within the purview of applicable law and the Constitution. We are of the view, however, that prior consultation with the real participants and the principal channels through which insurance products are distributed – the insurance agents and insurance brokers – as well as an honest recognition of their views and positions, even if contrary to those of the regulator, are absolutely imperative for constructive industry reforms to succeed.

We are firm in our resolve to cooperate with the Insurance Commission in an atmosphere of dialogue and a free exchange of ideas.

Protestant ministers decry surveillance

By Edwin Pines

PROTESTANT CHURCH LEADERS HAVE complained of harassment by police watching their offices.

Protestant ministers backed by Iglesia Filipina Independiente (IFI), general secretary of the United Church of Christ in the Philippines (UCCP), met with Philippine National Police officers yesterday to express their concern of their personal and church work on in Cebu and Manila being under strict surveillance.

They said members of their Quaker Church headquarters also reported spying since its incorporation starting three months ago.

Reinas said reporters that may be an offshoot of their church groups being tapped as "sources of the state" by security forces.

"But has been going on for a long time. And it has been a source of apprehension for us. How can church members be considered sources of the state?" Reinas said, insisting that Protestant church groups were involved only in "faith-related activities and services."

UCCP Executive Director, a member of Pastor Belarmino Quinsay who was arrested last month, said their work was based on "testimonies to the Gospel and the good."

"To just be targeted like some of these marginalized persons are members of militant groups, that's why should we be regarded as 'sources'?" Quinsay said.

The ministers also questioned the prioritization in the surveillance plan to two high profile cases involving the killing and abduction of religious.

Chief, Ateneo, a representative of the Philippine Independent Church also known as the Two suspects were arrested and charged with homicide and robbery. Reinas said they could be seen in the hallway and had been getting death threats on the phone.

"To see us just as a plain citizen because the victims in Cebu is disappeared. We would have wanted something else," Reinas said, adding that the police had been getting death threats on the phone.

"I think your members who can testify that the bishop received those messages. Without them and their testimony we will have to go back to the drawing board," Reinas said.

Top US officer tours former Abu camp

THE UNITED STATES PACIFIC COMMANDER toured in a cramped jungle camp of the Abu Sayyaf leader group on 100 island provinces, seeing evidence of the damage wrought by a US-backed offensive on the extremist group which is suspected of being in the 100 islands (see related report on page 10).

Adm. Timothy L. Keating, accompanied by 10 American Special Forces and Filipino guards, toured the camp, which is suspected of being in the 100 islands (see related report on page 10).

Keating, who said a local boat launch was a case to help him take through forest trails to the camp, said the highest 10 million effort to make the island a US-backed offensive was not a success.

Keating said the US and Philippine forces guarded the camp and the other islands, who included former Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Thomas C. Spence, US Marine and a US Special Forces officer who was killed during the jungle trip.

"We were happy that despite the difficulty of getting over that area, we did it," Spence told The Associated Press in Singapore.

"It just goes to show that we have good ground troops," he said.

Keating also showed pictures of two US Marines killed in the jungle trip, and a US Marine who was killed during the jungle trip.

Keating's trip "gives us higher eyes on the ground," he said. "It's a good thing to see the ground from the air."

Quebec City, Procureur Général (Attorney General) of the Province of Quebec, charged 10 officers from the Service de police de la ville de Québec (SPVQ) and the Service de police de la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC) for allegedly ignoring their own duties, leading to the dismissal of drug cases and the arrest of innocent people.

The charges were filed against 10 officers from the Service de police de la ville de Québec (SPVQ) and the Service de police de la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC).

Where explained that being present before and responding officers during the post-arrest operations, the presence and involvement of the police were not essential and amounted to the unnecessary promotion of the officers.

The police officers, however, had to appear during the trial and testify about the circumstances of the arrest, prompting the judge to say that to explain why they should not be charged.

Zoellick is new World Bank president

WASHINGTON—THE WORLD BANK ON MONDAY approved Robert Zoellick as its next president as the 185-country development lender moved to distance itself from a scandal that cost it credibility around the world.

Zoellick, 52, who is vice-chair of investment bank Goldman Sachs, is to take office Sunday. A well-known economic troublemaker, he has the task of rebuilding trust in the development lender that crumbled under former president Paul Wolfowitz.

Zoellick was hired to replace

Wolfowitz, a troubled two-year tenure after the bank treasurer had violent rials in arranging a bank buyout and protection package for the private company, a bank was placed, by state-owned banks.

Zoellick, a former deputy secretary of state and US trade representative in the administration of US President George W. Bush, was nominated by Bush on May 20 to succeed Wolfowitz, an ex-US deputy defense secretary and an architect of the Iraq war.

"Over 100 years of the World Bank, I will be eager to meet the people who drive the agenda of economic growth in all 185 nations, with particular emphasis to Africa, advancing social and economic development, lowering poverty, and strengthening legal, governance, and justice," Zoellick said in a statement.

Zoellick was unanimously approved for a five-year term as the 11th president of the bank, the 29-member executive board said in a statement.

Under its chartering agreement, the United States chooses the head of the World Bank and European countries select the head of its sister institution, the International Monetary Fund.

Zoellick replaced the controversial Paul Wolfowitz, who is deeply connected to the rescue of the World Bank on helping struggling nations developing, grow their economies, strengthen transparency and accountability in government, and offer risk to the private sector of a better life.

Zoellick is a former US trade representative and a former US ambassador to the World Bank.

The incoming president has acknowledged the daunting challenges of his appointment.

The lengthy search for his successor followed the resignation of Wolfowitz, who stepped down after a scandal involving his affair with a World Bank employee.

IN AN EFFORT TO ALLEVIATE the adverse effect of power generation on the environment, the Department of Energy has proposed that $3 billion of National Power Corp.'s loans be converted into grants to be used in the establishment of renewable energy projects.

Energy Secretary Eusebio Lacanalan said that instead of having power projects that cause a lot of damage to the environment, the government would choose to allow the government to use the money for projects that are environmentally friendly and clean technology.

"To the case of Napocor, it would need $3 billion. There is a way to mobilize that amount. In terms of reporting, we can address that debt coming by mobilizing that amount for renewable energy projects," he said.

He also pointed out that the government would have to find a way to mobilize that amount for renewable energy projects.

Manufacturing output continued to shrink, posted 1.3% decline in April

By Michelle V. Rivas

OUTPUT OF MANUFACTURING FIRMS, MEASURED IN TERMS OF PRODUCTION VALUE, CONTINUED TO FALL IN APRIL AS WHEN AN ECONOMIC SURVEY RESULTS OF OVER DEMAND FROM THE U.S. AND OUTSIDE MARKETS.

The volume of production index (DPI) for manufacturing firms fell 1.3 percent in April, although the rate slowed from the 2.8 percent contraction in March, the National Bureau of Economic Research said.

Survey of Industrial Industries (MII) showed that the MII had been on a decline since the start of the year, by 1.3 percent in February and by 0.9 percent in January.

The contraction that in manufacturing was not previously noted continues as the manufacturing sector had been on a decline since the start of the year, by 1.3 percent in February and by 0.9 percent in January.

RP products shine in HK

By Amy K. Remo

THE INVESTMENT OF AGRICULTURE has booked over P711 million in orders for Philippine fresh and processed agricultural products during its first participation in Hong Kong's recent food exhibit.

Agriculture Department Secretary Renato Peralta said the 19-led selling mission in the recently concluded 2007 AGF managed to exceed its sales target of P700 million by P11 million, despite the presence of big local competitors.

"The Philippine pavilion inside the Hong Kong Convention Center was the only Asian booth located in the Grand Hall, where the booths of economic giants like the United States and Australia were also situated," said Peralta-Peralta to a reporter.

The P711 million in booked and negotiated sales, according to Peralta-Peralta, were for 18 Philippine companies and organizations reporting fresh fruits, produce, meat, fish, and processed foods, such as mangoes, papaya, chips, fruit cocktail and banana chips.

These companies include top Agri-Market Inc., Manila Trade Inc., Asia Farms, Asia International Trading, G2D United Products, Green Food Products, Marubi Inc., 3rd Marine Corp., KRM Corp. and PVA Farm Development.

Earlier, New Zealand-based importer and distributor pledged to buy over P20 million worth of fresh and processed agri-livestock exports from the Philippines.

The LPO active participants in trade and selling missions across the globe this year is in line with the goal to open up new markets for Philippine commodities.

Providing access to local and international markets is part of the department's program to spur agri and livestock farm growth and raise rural incomes.

In this pre-audition 2BU! Exclusive, Chris Daughtry took time to answer seven questions—in his own handwritten style.

It's worth the author's labor, you might be surprised to see.
